Of How To Budget For
Your Next Website Project

HOW MUCH WILL A NEW WEBSITE COST?

If you're considering getting a new or redesigned website for your business or brand and want to know how much will it cost, then you definitely need to read this!

Web Designers and Firms come in all different sizes and cover a vast array of services. So it's safe to say you can easily get lost in the shuffle. And even if you were to send a proposal to 5 different web design companies you will get 5 different quotes for the SAME project!

Instead of thinking about "How much will this Website project cost me?" The best way to look at your situation would be "How will this project add value to my business?" This kind of reasoning can help you clarify all the pros and cons of moving forward with your web design project.

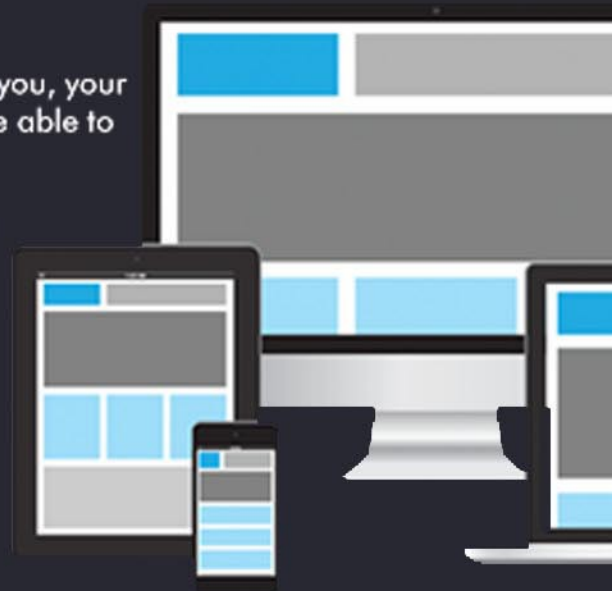

By taking a hard look at your online presence, and understanding how you, your goals and how your budget aligns with this project, only then will you be able to come to a idea of what web solution works for you.

Truth is, for web design and development companies there IS no broad standardized pricing schedule. As this is an industry that is service-oriented (think Contractors), instead of a commodity.

So with that said, you can spend anywhere from $0 to well over $100,000 for web design alone.

So it's important to take this into account when deciding what you want in your Web Design Project.

This guide will help you have a good idea of what to expect when investing in a new website at almost every price range and solutions that may be right for you based on your budget!

YOU:

How involved will you be in the design/development process? Assuming you're not having a budget, you're doing everything on your own with a free site builder. That puts you in the role(s) of designer, developer, project manager, content writer AND marketer. As your budget increases, so will your responsibility increase for each aspect of your project

YOUR GOALS:

What kind of website do you want? Do you want a site that looks decent enough to establish a presence? Or something that will make a statement to your competition that you've arrived? As you would expect, each of these goals are different that will directly impact your budget.

YOUR BUDGET:

Your budget will ultimately determine your goals and your personal involvement with your project. So if you have no specific budget you will be directly involved with all aspects of the design, development, marketing, and advertising which in itself is a full-time job

All Three of these elements will directly impact how involved you will be in the design and development phases of your website!

E-Commerce

If you thought the pricing for regular websites was all over the map, that's nothing compared to an E-Commerce website.

Because you're dealing with so many additional factors such as payment processing, security, fulfillment, inventory and inputting many different product skews an E-Commerce website is typically far more expensive and complex than a regular website.

If you're looking for an affordable option to having an E-Commerce website, sites such as Shopify offer a turnkey solution for opening a store online.

Otherwise, when working with a reputable design and development firm, be prepared to pay anywhere from $10,000-$50,000 and above for an E-Commerce website.

What is Hosting?

Think of your website in terms of Real Estate.

Your domain is the title to the property, your hosting is the land, your website is building on the land. You need all three to have a house.

What kind of hosting you should get, goes back to your goals and budget.

Recommendation

If visitor traffic or security is not a priority issue, but you need affordable and reliable hosting, consider Blue Host or Host Gator for your hosting needs

If you have or require a WordPress or Drupal site, and are more concerned with speed and security, consider 1and1.com

REAL ESTATE

Opportunity Cost

Warren Buffet, the world's greatest business investor and second richest person on the planet, said that the key to making good business decisions is understanding Opportunity Cost.

Opportunity Cost is not just asking 'Will I get a good return on my investment' it is asking the question 'Of all the things I could do with this money, is this the overall best thing I could do'

When choosing a new website designer the question most people ask is 'How much will this website cost' but that's actually not the best question to ask. The real question to ask is 'Which website is going to produce the most value for my business overall?'

Someone getting a "free" website might think they got a better deal than someone who paid $5,000 for their website. But the $5,000 website might have generated more traffic, more leads and more business than the "free" website and in terms of total dollars the "free" website might have cost the business $100,000 in lost business it might have otherwise gained.

ANATOMY OF A WEBSITE

What Most Web Designers Don't Want You to Know

Here's a little secret most website designers don't want you to know. ALL websites, no matter who you hire, use CSS and HTML as the foundation of their site design. No matter what direction you go for your web design, know that there is no magical, or special code that will make your site a "real" website. It's ALL CSS and HTML.

"5 STARS IS AN UNDERSTATEMENT"

"I met Derek Reed of Reed Design Group at a networking event in Dallas. He reached out to me later after the event, and I wanted to redesign the existing Next Level Entertainment Quality Event Producer's site and after my formal intro meeting with RDG I immediately knew they were the way to go. RDG was on it from the very beginning and even with my busy schedule they worked with us throughout this entire process. 5 stars is an understatement for the services of RDG!"
